This matters because seat layouts vary by plane type and route, and online tools may not always reflect last-minute changes. Travelers who book Delta Airlines flight by phone often prefer this method because agents can explain the differences between aisle, window, bulkhead, and exit-row seating. For example, a traveler on a long-haul flight may want an aisle seat near the front for faster deplaning. Calling ensures your preference is applied correctly and confirmed immediately.

Why Phone Support Is Best for Seat Map Changes
